

ABSTRACT

A dental tray to receive a dental impression material thereon includes a base having a plurality of prongs the base having one or more openings to allow flowing of the dental impression material; a first wall extending from one side of the base, the first wall having one or more openings to allow flowing of the dental impression material; and at least one detachable portion formed on one end of one prong, the detachable portion being removable to shorten the prong length.